

The Jean Monnet Centre invites

Date of the event: 17/05/2017

Jean Monnet Center of Volga State University of Technology invites students, researchers and professionals to the international conference “Forest ecosystems in the conditions of climate change: regional and international perspectives”.

The conference will be held on the 17-19 of May.

Application deadline – March 31.

Conference purpose is familiarization of young researchers and specialists with the last results of scientific research and practice, monitoring and remote assessment of forest management, international projects and technologies in the field of forest ecosystems in the conditions of climate change. The conference is a great opportunity for networking with colleagues from research centers of the European Union and Russia.

Peer-reviewed articles will be published for free in the annual international collection of scientific articles “Forest ecosystems in the conditions of climate change: biological productivity and remote monitoring”. The authors may be professors, graduate students, students, as well as scientific and practical workers. The collection is registered in RSCI and AGRIS.

To get more information and register for participation click here